The valet, as a cultural object, expresses a particular vocation to personification, as is evident, for example, the term in the identical Italian or German language stummerdiener (literally mute servant) or herrendiener.

We can not help but remember Harlequin, servant popular character as part of the Italian commedia dell'arte.

Valet erculineo, plays this role perfectly faithful servant with its solid stainless steel construction on the mighty foot formed by the perforated annulus, also in stainless steel.
